

A Report
Two-Credit Certificate Course on ‘Human Rights and Justice’

The Centre for Advanced Studies in Human Rights (CASIHR) at Rajiv Gandhi National University of Law, Punjab, organised the Two Credit Certificate Course on ‘Human Rights and Justice’ from August 31, 2024 to November 5, 2024. This ten-week course was meticulously designed to provide a nuanced understanding of human rights through diverse perspectives. It successfully attracted a total of 168 participants, including academicians, students, lawyers, and Ph.D. scholars, reflecting its broad appeal and relevance.

Each session of the course explored a distinct aspect of human rights, delivered by resource persons who brought valuable insights and fostered engaging discussions, enriching the learning experience. The program concluded with an examination in the final week, aimed at assessing participants' understanding of the topics covered. The sessions were both theoretical and practical, ensuring a balanced approach to the study of human rights.

The course highlighted the importance of a collaborative approach in addressing the multifaceted nature of human rights. Participants gained critical insights into the subject, fostering a deeper understanding and appreciation for the principles of justice and equality. Through the concerted efforts of the faculty coordinators Dr. Sukhwinder Kaur Virk and Dr. Jaswinder Kaur, student coordinators and volunteers, resource persons, and participants, the course has not only achieved its academic objectives but has also contributed to shaping informed individuals capable of making meaningful contributions to the field of human rights.
