

MCC ORIENTATION SESSION FOR THE BATCH OF 2027

22nd - 27th OCTOBER

Mooting is an integral part of a law student's life and to further the moot culture at RGNUL, the Moot Court Committee organised the fresher's orientation week from 22nd – 27th October 2022. This orientation was organised to acquaint the Batch of 2027 with the indispensable advocacy and drafting skills required to compete in a moot court competition. The orientation session conducted offline in the seminar hall over the course of a week encompassed various sessions wherein final year students of Batch of 2023 with prior experience in moot court interacted with the freshers and shared their expertise.

The first-year students were apprised of the strategies and techniques involved at the various stages of a moot court competition. The first session equipped students with the prerequisites for conducting legal research on a moot proposition. The basics of drafting written submissions along with the substantive process of argument formulation was discussed in detail through the second session. This was followed by a session on the basic rules and the technical aspects of formatting of written submissions on the third day. The first-year students engaged in a discourse with seasoned orators on the skills required by speakers and their demeanour while presenting oral arguments in the last leg of the orientation week.

On the final day the MCC addressed the Batch of 2027 about the working of the RGNUL Moot Court Committee as well as the University rules for allotment of various National and International moots. The MCC also addressed questions related to the RGNUL Freshers' Intra Moot Court Competition, 2022. The comprehensive orientation week enriched the Batch of 2027 with knowledge and confidence for their upcoming moot court journey.
