About RGNUL Exagium 2016: Essays on Classics

Rajiv Gandhi National University of Law, Punjab, India announces International Essay Writing Competition-Exagium 2016- for the undergraduates, postgraduates and research scholars across disciplines. With an objective to enhance the reading and writing skills of the students, RGNUL Exagium 2016 attempts to engage the undergraduates and postgraduates in the reading of Classics.

Classics are those books which constitute experiences, thoughts and ideas of great writers. These books deal with universal ideas which provide great insights and vision. Besides imprinting themselves on the imagination of the readers, these books preserve the collective unconscious. "A Classic," according to Italo Calvino, "is a work which constantly generates a pulviscular cloud of critical discourse around it, but which always shakes the particles off." The writer expresses his views on the reading of classics in the book titled Why Read the Classics? The discourse of Classics resonates with universal issues. The reading of Classics gives a deeper understanding of our own times. The topographical epic about a city /person makes diverse issues visible. The classics penned by eminent authors and personalities imply continuance and consistence. The reading of such texts is of great significance to the young people as they get enlightened about various issues. This knowledge is also beneficial for the understanding of the contemporary times.

RGNUL Exagium 2016 provides a challenge to the reading, comprehending and writing skills of the students. The essay on the selected text should focus on the thematic concerns of the writer. Using the primary and secondary sources, the participants will write an analytical essay on the selected classic.
