TOWARDS EXCELLENCE IN LEGAL EDUCATION

Rajiv Gandhi National University of Law, Punjab, is now three years old. Within a short span of three years, the University has developed necessary infrastructure congenial for serious academic work matching to any other well established institution. The present campus at Mohindra Kothi, now provides a well stocked library with more than 25000 titles, Hi-tech Computer Labs with leased line internet connectivity, web access to national and international legal, journals periodical and source material and Wi-Fi facilities extended to hostels, too. Our new campus is coming up at Sidhuwal, Bhadson Road, Patiala with all modern amenities and facilities to cater administrative, academic and residential needs of a National University of Law.

Legal education at the National Law Schools has special bearing and orientation towards overall excellence in different spheres of legal profession. Hence RGNUL has specially designed its curriculum for graduation and post-graduation courses to produce competent lawyers, judicial officers, researchers and above all responsible citizens. Accordingly, the scheme of the five year law course aims at providing sound knowledge of social science subjects, excellent command over language and comprehensive knowledge of law.

The course also includes classroom assignments, seminars and project work relating to each subject in the first three years of study. The students take up study of specialized branches of law according to their professional choice. Hence, fourth and fifth year curriculum of the course offers four distinct streams of specializations viz., Business and Intellectual Property Law; Criminal Law; Consumer Protection Law Policy and Procedure; and Human Rights Law and Practice. In addition to two compulsory subjects in each semester of the fourth and fifth year, there are three specialized papers specifically designed for each stream alongwith the project work and moot court presentations. The whole scheme conforms to the Bar Council of India's newly developed course curriculum the allows confering of the Honours Degree with mention of respective area of study in the degree.

The faculty is available in the form of completely dedicated whole time teachers, guest teachers taking regular classes and visiting Professors. The teaching methodology includes extensive and intensive class room teaching aiming at participative learning. The thrust is not only towards teaching but also towards professional training. The guided research work through projects provides the students an opportunity to make indepth study of the important issues of law. The study as such is supplemented by moot court work and incourse interships at various places and levels.

By now, the RGNUL students have developed high competitive acumen and their hard work has started yielding results that is evident from their performances at the prestigious academic events within and outside the country.
