2.	PRO/232 07-08-2025	National Conference on Reading Dystopias: Configuring Future in the Past and the Past in the Future (07 August 2025)	LIVE LAW NEWS  Department of English, Rajiv Gandhi National University of Law, Punjab organized a National Conference on "Reading Dystopias: Configuring Future in the Past and the Past in the Future" on 7th August, 2025. The inaugural session of the event commenced with a Welcome Address by Prof. (Dr.) Jai S. Singh, Vice Chancellor, Rajiv Gandhi National University of Law, Punjab. Emphasizing the intersections between literature, law, and society, Dr. Singh underscored the value of literary inquiry, especially of dystopian texts, in interrogating contemporary socio-political structures. Plenary Address was delivered by journalist, novelist, and academic Mr. Prayaag Akbar, author of the novel "Leila". Invoking the phrase "Nolite te Bastardes Carborundorum", Akbar traced its etymological play and satirical invention, revealing how even a fictional Latin aphorism can become a symbol of defiance. He reflected on its classroom-like cadence, noting that such phrases, crafted to resemble mottos or rules, often evoke the figure of the teacher as the earliest enforcer of discipline. This reading opened an avenue into how structures of power embed themselves in the mundane, through institutions that appear neutral or nurturing. Akbar further expanded his discussion through readings of two contemporary dystopian novels, drawing parallels between speculative futures and the lived experiences of marginalized communities. He argued that dystopia is not always a far-off possibility but often a persistent condition, particularly for those already existing at the edges of systemic power. His address situated dystopian fiction as a vital genre through which political imaginaries and lived realities intersect. Prof. (Dr.) Manju Jaidka, eminent scholar, former Chairperson of the Department of English at Panjab University, and Founder-President of MELOW in her address talked on wide-ranging and lyrical reflection, and traced the genealogy of dystopian thought through canonical figures such as Dante, Milton, and Yeats, positioning dystopia as a literary form that transgresses, challenges, and reconfigures normative boundaries. Her intertextual approach brought a gravitas to the conversation, highlighting dystopia's role in exploring existential anxieties, moral ambiguity, and the perennial human yearning for transformation amidst despair. Her address demonstrated how dystopia functions both as critique and as a mode of radical hope. The inaugural session set a tone for the conference, laying the groundwork for a day of exploration and scholarly exchange. The Conference offered a platform for interdisciplinary dialogue through three concurrent technical sessions held. Scholars and students from across the country, spanning Jodhpur, Greater Noida, Dehradun, Jammu, Noida, Patiala, and Kolkata, came together to interrogate dystopian imaginaries through lenses of gender, law. The first session, chaired by Dr. Tanya Mander and moderated by Ms. Palak Singla and Ms. Vandana Sharma, focused on Indian Feminist Dystopias. It brought forth engagements with themes of surveillance, control, and resistance as articulated in both literary and socio-cultural contexts. Discussions ranged from gendered surveillance in "The Girl in the Glass Case", and the normalization of bodily control in educational institutions, to questions of gender performativity in Manjula Padmanabhan's "Escape" and maternal erasure in Atwood's "The Handmaid's Tale". The session concluded with a critique of liberal biopolitics in Red Clocks, exposing how seemingly progressive frameworks may obscure deeper systems of control. The second session, chaired by Dr. Chasul Phogat and moderated by Ms. Vandana Sharma, turned to the relationship between dystopian thought, environmental degradation, and legal frameworks. Presentations addressed the role of the essay as a form of resistance, the complicity of justice systems in perpetuating dystopian realities, and the gendered consequences of ecological crises. Texts such as "The Water Cure" and "The New Wilderness" were examined through an ecofeminist lens, while discussions also unpacked legal reform as illusionary in the context of sexual violence and explored the dystopian framing of moral policing in contemporary Indian law. Simultaneously, the third session chaired by Dr. Vibha Bhoot and moderated by Ms. Palak Singla explored dystopian representations in media. This panel offered a compelling shift to the digital and visual, analyzing how screen-based narratives engage with dystopian tropes. Papers examined the distortion of reality in the works of Philip K. Dick and William Gibson, feminist revolutions portrayed in digital media, recurring themes of control in cinematic dystopias, and environmental exploitation as presented in streaming documentaries. Together, the three sessions demonstrated the depth and diversity of dystopian discourse, affirming the genre's relevance in addressing contemporary anxieties. The deliberations laid a strong foundation for future discussions on the role of dystopian storytelling in critiquing structures of power and imagining alternative futures.

3.	PRO/233 12-08-2025	International Symposium on “The Geneva Conventions at the 76th: Contemporary Challenges.” (12 August 2025)	LIVE LAW NEWS  The Centre for Advanced Studies in International Humanitarian Law (CASH) at Rajiv Gandhi National University of Law (RGNUL), Punjab, organised a one-day symposium on “The Geneva Conventions at the 76th: Contemporary Challenges” at the university campus in hybrid mode. The event commemorated 76 years since the adoption of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949, which form the cornerstone of international humanitarian law, protecting the wounded and sick on land, shipwrecked members at sea, prisoners of war, and civilians during armed conflicts. The programme commenced with a welcome address by Prof. (Dr.) Jai Shankar Singh, Vice Chancellor, RGNUL, who emphasised the enduring relevance of the Geneva Conventions and the urgent need to address modern-day challenges in their implementation. The symposium brought together experts. Major General P.K. Goswami highlighted disturbing trends including targeting of civilian areas, urbanisation of warfare, disinformation, and the use of autonomous systems and cyber tools. He urged regulation of new technologies, governance of private military companies, and stronger mechanisms to protect civilians, concluding that while we cannot change the beginning, we can change the ending. Wing Commander Dr. U.C. Jha examined the humanitarian impact of modern conflicts, referencing the Israel-Gaza war, Syrian civil war, and threats to civilians, journalists, and children. He discussed cyber warfare, lethal autonomous systems, AI targeting, and hypersonic missiles, stressing that these challenge the IHL principles of distinction, proportionality, and precaution. He emphasised that the Geneva Conventions, framed in a pre-digital era, require regular updates to address threats from space, biotechnology, and non-state actors in twenty-first century conflicts. Ms. Areti Sianni, Chief of Mission, UNHCR India and the Maldives, underlined the growing global displacement crisis and UNHCR's role in protecting refugees and internally displaced persons. Commending India's humanitarian tradition towards Tibetan, Sri Lankan, and other refugees, she urged the adoption of a national refugee policy framework to replace ad hoc measures. She called on India to leverage its leadership in the Global South to address root causes of displacement and urged universities to develop solutions for conflict victims. She highlighted that India's humanitarian traditions and contemporary humanitarian practices are cherished and need to be shared globally. Since 1969, UNHCR India established its office in New Delhi and since 1992 in Chennai. The Government of India extended all support to UNHCR India and its staff, enabling UNHCR India to assist refugee populations in India. UNHCR India appreciates the support rendered by the Government of India to the refugee community and UNHCR India values its engagement with the Government of India. UNHCR India hopes to see its collaboration with India expand to other countries that need, and welcome, India's humanitarian support. India is a member of the UNHCR's Executive Committee. UNHCR India believes that India can leverage its influence to address root causes of displacement. Dr. Ivneet Walia, Associate Professor of Law and Registrar concluded the session with the remarks on the evolving landscape of warfare and humanitarian protection. She noted that emerging cyber developments, including advanced AI systems, autonomous weapons, and even concepts such as cyborg technology, pose challenges to International Humanitarian Law (IHL). Dr. Walia reiterated that adapting IHL to modern realities is essential to safeguarding civilians and preserving humanitarian principles in future conflicts. An Open House Discussion, moderated by Dr. Sunod Jacob, Government Liaison Officer with the UNHCR, provided a platform for in-depth dialogue between speakers, faculty, and students on pressing humanitarian issues, including compliance challenges in contemporary armed conflicts. The event concluded with presentations by RGNUL Research Centres to the UNHCR, showcasing the university's research capabilities and commitment to advancing international humanitarian law scholarship. Reflecting on the success of the symposium, Dr. Sangeeta Taak and Dr. Sukhwinder Kaur Virk, Assistant Professors of Law at RGNUL and Convenors of the event, expressed their gratitude to the speakers, participants, and the UNHCR for their support. They highlighted that the symposium not only acknowledged the legacy of the Geneva Conventions but also created a space for academic exchange and reflection on contemporary humanitarian law challenges.

6.	PRO/237 08-09-2025	Two-Day International Conference on Insolvency and Bankruptcy Law (6-7 September 2025)	LIVE LAW NEWS The Centre for Business Laws and Taxation (CBLT), Rajiv Gandhi National University of Law, Punjab, hosted a two-day International Conference on Insolvency and Bankruptcy Law: Challenges and Opportunities on September 6-7, 2025 in the online mode. Prof. (Dr.) Jai Shankar Singh, Vice-Chancellor of the University inaugurated the conference. He talked about the transformative role of insolvency reforms in India's financial and corporate ecosystem. Prof. Shankar discussed the impact of geopolitical shocks on Micro Small and Medium Enterprises exposing them to vulnerabilities in current frameworks. He emphasized that there is a need to examine the personal guarantor jurisprudence. He stressed that there is a need to explore the evolving framework of insolvency in India, the challenges faced in its implementation, and the opportunities it presents for strengthening the financial and legal system. Mr. Sumant Batra, the first Asian President of INSOL International and Founder of the Insolvency Law Academy, offered insights on challenges to insolvency reforms. He highlighted the judiciary's role in shaping Insolvency and Bankruptcy Code (IBC) jurisprudence, the global relevance of Insolvency and Bankruptcy Board of India. He stressed that need to learn lessons from Singapore's reforms. Prof. (Dr.) Naresh Vats, Dean Academic Affairs of the University underlined the value of such academic platforms in equipping students with exposure beyond classrooms and preparing them for professional engagements. Prof. Vats remarked that Insolvency law has emerged as one of the dynamic areas of legal reform in recent years, shaping not only the corporate sector but also the larger economic framework of our country. Dr. Manoj Kumar, Faculty Coordinator of CBLT-IBLD, reflected on the development of the Insolvency and Bankruptcy Code (IBC) and emphasized the importance of time-bound resolution as the Code's cornerstone. The inaugural concluded with a vote of thanks by Dr. Manoj Sharma, appreciating the efforts of speakers, faculty, and the student team. The panel discussion on Group Insolvency, generated an exchange of ideas among speakers and participants. The discussion brought together a mix of Indian and international perspectives, emphasizing the urgency of addressing group and cross-border insolvency within India's still maturing insolvency ecosystem. Speakers and panelists who participated in the conference were Professor Jason Harris, Professor of Corporate Law, Director, Ross Parsons Centre for Commercial, Corporate and Taxation Law, The University of Sydney Law School, Australia; Mr. Sidhant Kant: Equity Partner, Shardul Amarchand Mangaldas; Mr. Akash Chandra Jauhari, Co-Lead, Corporate Law and Financial Regulation Team, Vidhi Centre for Legal Policy; Mr. Ankit Goel, Chartered Accountant; Insolvency Professional, Founder & Partner, AAA Insolvency Professionals LLP; and, Ms. Pooja Bahry, Insolvency Professional. Prof. Jason Harris of the University of Sydney provided a comparative overview of Australia's insolvency regime. He traced the development of group insolvency in Australia, outlining both its achievements and shortcomings. Notably, he explained how Australia's broad definition of a "group" offers flexibility but also risks ambiguity, which complicates resolution when different companies in the same group undergo different types of insolvency. Drawing parallels, he observed that India's draft framework shares some features with the Australian approach, offering lessons but also cautionary tales. The session also featured a lively Q&A segment where students and delegates engaged the panelists with questions on real-world challenges such as jurisdictional conflicts, creditor coordination in multinational groups, and the enforceability of foreign judgments. Panelists responded with practical insights, explaining the interplay between domestic priorities and global obligations. The discussion combined theoretical reflection with grounded policy insights, offering participants a comprehensive understanding of the road ahead for India's group insolvency framework. The Two-Day International Conference provided an overview of the IBC's strengths, challenges, and future pathways. The Conference underscored the Code's economic significance, global relevance, and the need to address group and cross-border insolvency. The seven technical sessions showcased research, proposing reforms ranging from AI-driven early warning systems and blockchain integration to Environment Social and Governance prioritization, mediation frameworks, and substantive consolidation. Across sessions, the consensus was clear: while the IBC has transformed India's insolvency landscape by enhancing recovery and credit discipline, pressing gaps such as judicial delays, weak cross-border mechanisms, group insolvency challenges, and inadequate individual insolvency provisions—must be addressed through strategic legislative and institutional reforms.

He was addressing as the Chief Guest at the “Seasons of Life” — a Two-Day National Conference on Reconstructing Ageism and Youthism for a More Inclusive Society, organized by Rajiv Gandhi National University of Law (RGNUL), and funded by the Ministry of Social Justice and Empowerment and the National Institute of Social Defence (NISD), Government of India, New Delhi. Prof. (Dr.) Jai Shankar Singh, Vice Chancellor of RGNUL, presided over the conference and welcomed the dignitaries, while Dr. Jasleen Kewlani introduced the theme of the national conference. Emphasizing the role of elders in society, Tiwari stated that age should not be seen as a barrier in any field. Citing an example, he noted that the average age of Nobel Prize recipients is increasing. He added that the key to happiness and contentment in old age lies in a balanced combination of wisdom and energy. Referring to the religious text Bhagavad Gita, he emphasized that elders must take care of their physical and mental well-being to be able to support and guide the younger generation. Highlighting India's unique demographic advantage, he said, “India is not only a young nation but also one of the oldest civilizations, which gives us a unique edge. We are already the third-largest and the fastest-growing economy in the world. The most powerful advantage is our youth—64% of our population is between the ages of 15 to 35. At the same time, 6% of our population comprises senior citizens. If we, as a nation, can channel the energy of the youth along with the experience and wisdom of the elderly, India will undoubtedly achieve developed nation status well before the set target,” he affirmed. He further emphasized that the elderly must also focus on nourishing their spiritual health by taking a ‘good diet for the soul’. Professor (Dr.) Sanjay Tewari, Honorary Professor at the Russian Academy of Social & Fundamental Sciences, Moscow, delivered the Keynote Address, focusing on the importance of sports in enhancing the happiness index of the elderly. He added that it is essential for society—from academia and culture to politics—to work towards reducing intergenerational gaps to foster a more inclusive social fabric. Dr. Tanya Sengupta and Anumol Mathew from the Ministry of Social Justice and Empowerment and the National Institute of Social Defence (NISD), along with Manmohan Verma, Law Officer at the National Commission for Women, read their official messages. They highlighted the importance of the elderly in policymaking and the various legislative and welfare measures being implemented by the Government of India. Dr. Ivneet Walia, Officiating Registrar at RGNUL, specially invited senior citizens and honoured them in the Inaugural Session for their contributions to society and various institutions. Dr. Jasleen Kewlani, Convener and Organising Secretary of NatCon'25, remarked, “Simply being senior or elderly is not a big achievement—ageing is inevitable. What truly matters is how one behaves with that experience, and how much they contribute to guiding and uplifting the younger generation.” The Plenary Session featured talks by Dr. Vishal Chopra, Professor and Head of Pulmonary Medicine at Government Medical College, Patiala, and Dr. Kalpesh Gupta, Founder of Law Teachers India, who spoke on themes related to ageing and inclusivity. Student Conveners Daksh Khanna and Siya Pandita shared that the conference, NatCon'25, received 177 full-length research papers to be presented across 30 parallel academic business sessions, held both offline and online from September 20–21, 2025. Papers were contributed by authors from Sri Lanka, Bangladesh, Maldives, and Indonesia.

PRO/245 03-11-2025	Career Guidance in the Legal Profession - Interactive Session with Dr. Pradeep Rai, Senior Advocate, Supreme Court of India (01 November 2025)	LIVE LAW NEWS  Dr. Pradeep Rai, Senior Advocate, visited the Rajiv Gandhi National University of Law, Punjab on 01st November 2025, to deliver a lecture on Career Guidance in the Legal Profession. While addressing the students, he emphasised the importance of consistent hard work, prioritising one's health, and enjoying college life without losing focus on long-term goals. He encouraged students to identify and start exploring a niche area of law early in their academic journey, as specialisation will inevitably hold value in future professional choices. Dr. Rai also discussed the three-year rule in the judiciary examinations and noted that this period should be used meaningfully to acquire practical exposure and genuine legal insight. He advised students to have fun during their college years, but to remain mindful and deliberate in their actions. He also highlighted that a lawyer must have complete mastery over the facts of the case and should know them inside out. During the session, two students, Pranjali and Kushank, narrated short factual stories, and Mr. Rai analysed the legal issues within them in an engaging and interactive manner. Through this exercise, he emphasised the importance of reading the entire brief, preparing a proper synopsis, identifying the legal points involved, framing the questions of law, and determining the relevant grounds. He stressed that these elements are crucial for dissecting a case effectively and presenting strong arguments before the court. He concluded the session by wishing all the students the very best for their future and encouraged them to believe in their own capabilities. He also interacted with students and addressed their questions, noting that every conversation and every exchange contributes towards shaping one's personality and ultimately, shaping the lawyer they become.

PRO/246 21-11-2025	Panel Discussion on Strengthening Access to Justice for Marginalized Adivasis and Denotified / Nomadic Tribes under NALSA's SAMVAD Scheme (21 November 2025)	LIVE LAW NEWS  A panel discussion titled “Strengthening Access to Justice for Marginalized, Vulnerable Adivasis and Denotified / Nomadic Tribes under the NALSA (SAMVAD) Scheme, 2025” was organised on 20 th November 2025, bringing together legal experts, constitutional scholars, social practitioners, and community workers to deliberate on the systemic challenges faced by some of India’s most historically excluded communities. The discussion was graced by Ms. Amandeep Kaur, CJM and Secretary, DLSA, Prof. (Dr.) Satish Chandra, Professor of Law, RGNUL, and Dr. Abhinandan Bassi, Assistant Professor of Law and Faculty Co-ordinator, RGNUL Legal Aid Clinic. The event also witnessed the presence of members of the DLSA Panel and SAMVAD Committee members, whose insights enriched the deliberations. Speakers highlighted the persistent barriers that Adivasis and Denotified/Nomadic Tribes continue to face in accessing justice—ranging from social stigma and linguistic hurdles to inadequate awareness of legal rights, over-policing, and gaps in institutional sensitivity. While strong constitutional and legal safeguards exist, panelists noted a significant disconnect between the formal recognition of rights and their actual realization on the ground. The session further underscored that the NALSA (SAMVAD) Scheme holds transformative potential to bridge this gap through sustained dialogue, community-centric legal awareness, and strengthened collaboration between police authorities, legal services institutions, and grassroots organisations. Key recommendations included training Para-Legal Volunteers from within the communities, expanding mobile legal aid clinics, ensuring effective victim compensation mechanisms, and developing culturally responsive justice practices. Panelists collectively affirmed that ensuring justice for Adivasis and DNT/NT communities is not only a statutory requirement but also a constitutional and moral responsibility. The event concluded with a resounding call for coordinated institutional action to ensure that marginalized voices are heard, rights are upheld, and access to justice becomes a lived reality for every individual.

18.	PRO/251 23-12-2025	7th RGNUL Convocation (23 December 2025)	 Hindustan Times WEDNESDAY DECEMBER 24, 2025 04 [PATIALA LAW VARSITY SEVENTH CONVOCATION] Young lawyers must be nation-builders: CJI Uttar Pradesh NEW DELHI: Every generation inherits the Republic as an unfinished project. Chief Justice of India (CJI) Surya Kant said on Tuesday, urging young lawyers to see themselves not merely as "case builders" but as "nation-builders" who remain conscious of how today's disputes shape tomorrow's society. Addressing the seventh convocation ceremony of the Rajiv Gandhi National University of Law (RGNUL), Patiala, the CJI said that India's Constitution was not a static monument but a living blueprint whose meaning continuously depended on how lawyers, judges and institutions animated it through their work. "Our Constitution is not a monument cast in stone. It is an ingenious blueprint. The courts give it interpretation, institutions give it structure. You must give life. You must decide what India becomes," he said. Speaking to graduating students, the CJI made a clear distinction between lawyers who focus narrowly on winning cases and those who think more expansively about the justice system and its societal consequences. "The battle fought in the dispute of the day, a nation builds a culture for the future. The consequences of today's dispute on tomorrow's society," he said, calling the difference between the two "fundamental". While the former approach, he noted, was transactional, the latter was transformational. Justice Kant cautioned against reducing the legal profession to a narrow exercise of winning battles, mastering procedure, and securing victories. Such an approach, he said, might produce competent practitioners but not necessarily lawyers who strengthen democratic institutions. "The question is not whether you win or lose, but whether you will build," he told the graduating cohort, urging them to reflect on the values that should guide their professional choices. Placing the role of young lawyers in a broader national context, the CJI said today's judiciary was entering a legal world far more complex than its own. India, he said, was moderating at a pace faster than its institutions could comfortably adapt, with disputes increasingly cutting across technology, economics, science and public policy. "Contracts now involve algorithms, property includes digital assets, families stretch across jurisdictions, environmental issues challenge ancient times itself," he observed. In this evolving landscape, lawyers were expected not just to argue cases but to interpret complex realities, advise responsibly, innovate solutions and, above all, humanise the law. Justice Kant said that his repeated calls for mediation, judicial moderation and a unified national judicial policy were not abstract ideas but appeals directed squarely at young lawyers who would eventually be responsible for carrying these reforms forward. "Words spoken from the bench acquire meaning only when young minds convert them into action," he said. Drawing from over four decades in the legal profession, the CJI said that he described as three pillars essential for a nation that endures and thrives: integrity, compassion and curiosity. Integrity, he said, was not merely a personal virtue but institutional infrastructure. A justice system, he stressed, must not be the arena of trust, "but the arena of trust". "Curiosity was not an optional upgrade, but a necessity for the future," he said. The second pillar, compassion, Justice Kant described as essential in preventing justice from becoming mechanical and hollow. Drawing on experiences from both the bar and the bench, he spoke of instances where restraint, rather than urgency, best served dignity and fairness. "Compassion does not mean abandoning principle or lowering standards. It means recognising that the law, as we know it, is not the end." The third pillar, curiosity, Justice Kant described as the engine that keeps the law responsive to a rapidly changing world. Legal education, he said, was the foundation, and lawyers who stopped learning quickly became irrelevant. He urged students to embrace technology, learning a language without surrendering their core values. In his concluding remarks, Justice Kant returned to the idea with which he began: that the Constitution was not just a document but a living matter — integrity, compassion and curiosity. Integrity, he said, was not merely a personal virtue but institutional infrastructure. A justice system, he stressed, must not be the arena of trust, "but the arena of trust". "Curiosity was not an optional upgrade, but a necessity for the future," he said.
