Editorial

The adherence to covid protocol, social distancing, restrictive movement and closure of institutes due to the global outbreak of Covid-19 pandemic significantly disrupted traditional educational practices in the academic session 2020-21. Amidst the discontinued face-to-face teaching and apprehension of losing an academic year in 2020, the Rajiv Gandhi National University of Law, Punjab not letting down guard during different phases of the pandemic, took to online platforms for continuity in higher education. While the government and frontline workers were doing their best to check the outbreak, RGNUL continued imparting quality legal education. Students of B.A.LL.B (Hons.), LL.M. and Research Scholars were engaged in best practices and participatory learning through Cisco Webex, Google Meet and Google Classroom platforms. Innovative online teaching methods and alternative assessment strategies adopted by RGNUL in this tough time enabled students to overcome the challenges. Though the educators and learners were compelled to adopt virtual environment in the pandemic pandemonium times, they adapted to the transition for a fruitful session. Teachers and students at RGNUL explored online platforms to overcome limitations of virtual teaching and collaborated for organizing various academic events. Students attended classes, appeared for examination and participated in Moot Court Competitions, e-conferences and activities in consonance with the University academic schedule. As portals of learning globally grappled with inadequacies of the online platforms and impending threat of emerging variants in the pandemic times, the willingness of the administrators, faculty, students and staff to march ahead paved way to a meaningful order in the Covid-19 induced chaos for an eventful session at RGNUL.

Orientation Week

Extraordinary times call for extraordinary efforts for effective dissemination of knowledge. RGNUL, Punjab geared up for the troubled pandemic times in 2020 and extended every opportunity to the students through online mode. The Orientation Week for the new students of Postgraduate and Undergraduate courses was conducted through virtual mode from 17th -22nd October, 2020. The students along with their parents were taken on virtual tour of the campus by Prof. (Dr.) Paramjit S. Jaswal, Vice-Chancellor, RGNUL, Punjab. He introduced the new branches of online learners to various units of the University and acquainted them with functioning of the batch of the University. Despite the disruptions and delays caused by Covid-19, the university disseminated essential information to the new batch through virtual kits. All the required information about the policies, activities, working and regulations was made available to the students through these kits. Regular orientation lectures were conducted to guide and train the students for the virtual classroom system. The students were also acquainted with IT facilities, remote access to library, YourDost and also how to make a choice between the various majors and minors options.
